The Division of Medicaid and Medical Assistance (DMMA) has released a health care plan for children with medical complexity.

Identifying children with medical complexity

According to DMMA, children with medical complexity are a subgroup of children and youth who have special health care needs because of their extensive utilization of health care.

DMMA considers a child medically complex if the child falls into two or more of these categories:¹

- Having one or more chronic health conditions associated with significant morbidity or mortality.
- Being part of a high-risk or vulnerable population with functional limitations affecting their ability to perform activities of daily living (ADLs).
- Having high health care needs or utilization patterns, including requiring three or more subspecialties, therapists, or surgeries.
- Having a continuous dependence on technology to overcome functional limitations and maintain a basic quality of life.

AmeriHealth Caritas Delaware Clinical Care Coordinators work one-on-one with members who have complex medical issues.
